

Marty Brennan
Managing Director, Transaction Advisory Services

Mr. Marty Brennan has more than 20 years of experience in the management and technology consulting space developing and implementing business, operational, and IT strategies for both public and private sector clients. He develops merger integration strategies for deals ranging from multi-billion to tuck-in and led integration management efforts to achieve operational and synergy targets on schedule. He has earned a reputation as a hands-on executive working closely with industry executives and private equity firms to deliver results while reducing risk.

Prior to joining Deep Water Point & Associates, Mr. Brennan served as a managing director leading the transaction advisory line of business for Wolf Den Associates which included sourcing, due diligence, and post-merger integration offerings. He brings a practitioner perspective, having led consulting business units serving federal and commercial customers. With this experience, he developed and executed local market strategies, drove financial performance (P&L), managed client and internal-facing personnel, implemented business development and capture strategies, and oversaw human resources, recruiting, staffing, facilities, and contract management functions.

Before joining Wolf Den, Marty established and led the Merger Integration practice at Celerity. Previously he was market lead for North Highland's Washington, D.C. office, held dual roles as president of Washington Consulting, Inc. and vice president and operations manager at Alion Science & Technology, and had roles of increasing responsibility at KPMG Consulting / Bearing Point, Arthur Andersen Business Consulting, and Dealy Strategy Group.

Mr. Brennan has a BA in mathematics from Yale University and an MBA from Georgetown University McDonough School of Business.
